

Juan José Martínez Jambrina, Head of the Mental Health Service of Avilés, in Asturias, Spain.

I think that the community model is the most appropriate strategy to care for people with mental illness but we still continue focusing our efforts on hospital interventions rather than interventions in the patient's usual environment where it is going to have to be developed and where they will have to cope with daily life problems, as well as all citizens.

EUCOMS can be an excellent tool to link essential activities with the political agenda that emerge from the European Parliament.

